 ABS-CBN telenovela.

Prominent news anchor and former Congressman Ted Failon yesterday rushed his wife to the New Era General Hospital, where she was fighting for her life with a gunshot wound in the head at press time.

Police were poised to arrest Failon late last night allegedly for tampering with evidence and obstruction of justice, although the circumstances of the shooting of his wife, Trinidad Amato-Ortega, 45, remained unclear.

Senator Raul Francisco Marcos
 Marbong said it had not been established

Senate to probe Villar amid cries of 'political rubout'

By Michael Lim-Uloc

LEGISLATORS ASK OUT AND CHARGES of a "political rubout" are being aired in connection with the ethics complaint against Sen. Manny Villar.

Amid accusations of double standards, the Senate committee on ethics and privileges yesterday ordered Villar to answer charges that his real estate empire had benefited from the alleged P300-million double-bidding for the C-5 road extension project.

During a meeting, the committee chaired by Sen. Panfilo Lacson first adopted the order prepared by its legal counsel finding sufficiency in form and substance in the complaint lodged by Sen. Manuel Biñanay, and ordered Villar to respond in five days.

Villar said reporters that the accusations did not come as a surprise.
 He said he had long expected such a one-sided decision from his fellow senators.

"I've been saying all along that based on the composition of the committee, we can't expect fairness from
 it. What is happening is to be expected until 2013," he said.

Villar said the extension project has

PNP chief vows action vs vigilantes

THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL POLICE chief yesterday ordered his men to actively seek out vigilantes who report to him rights and defend the rule of law.

PNP Director General, said he had ordered the regional police chief to "prosecute vigilantes and the criminal charges against vigilantes based on their findings."

"With more leads to work on and more evidence to establish a strong case, I am confident that we can achieve a major breakthrough" in the investigation, he said.

Persons also called on Speaker Prospero Nograles, who represents Iloilo City, to share with police the information he has gathered about the vigilante-led cases.

800 killed

This count could prove a relief to some courts that vigilantes killed about 800 suspected criminals, including several justice officials, in Iloilo over the past decade, it largely matches the "best estimate" of local courts.

Many of the vigilante killings were reported by police to human rights groups, the New York-based Human Rights Foundation said in a report on the killings.

Human Rights Watch criticized the national government for failing to act on the killings, saying that the investigations were "too slow."

Nograles denied the killings were "unsubstantiated," adding that such accusations "were made without the benefit of hard evidence." He stressed that the national police could only "act against suspects if it has reasonable probable cause, legally obtained evidence, or guidance from an official from the justice and health of citizens."

"Therefore, we need the support and cooperation of the judiciary, especially those who are willing to work in court against vigilantes," he added.

Human Rights Watch, however, said vigilantes were reluctant to come forward because they feared the authorities and believed they would receive no justice.

Fil-Am vets receive 1st batch of checks

By Cynthia D. Roberts

FLYING-AMERICAN War veterans in the United States revived last week the Elmhurst of sharks from the US government representing their long-run compensation for services rendered during World War II. The Philippine Embassy in Washington reported yesterday.

The sharks were hunted out at a reception hosted by Philippine Ambassador to the UN Wally C. Gao as the Philippine Embassy in continuing runs the "Strawry Kagibing".

Qust did not mention how many veterans were included in the study.

Fort. Major Gen. Antonio Sagulon, who represented US Veterans Administration Secretary Gen. Eric Shinseki, handed out checks to qualified veterans who were present at the reception.

Under the stimulus law, veterans who are US citizens will receive a one-time payment of $12,000 while those who are living outside the US will get $6,000. The compensation is on top of other benefits what they are getting back from the US and Philippine governments.

The ESEA limit involves a claim for compensation no later than February 15, 2010, which is one year from the date of enactment of the legislation.

Historic moment

In his remarks, Gao called on everyone to "remember those who fought in defense of our nation and people so that we can live today in freedom and peace."

For his part, Sigurdson said, "I cannot underscore enough the significance of today's ceremony as it is not only a day of remembrance for those who fought valiantly at Bataan, but a historic moment for those who have long since passed and those who are with us this morning."

A short story from the ABC News network featured in its evening news program the embassy's collection of "Karew ng Kapitagan," along with a brief background of the Filipino seamen's struggle and history to achieve recognition and benefits from the US government for their services in WW II.

The coverage also includes footage and a report on the "Killing Kaglino" activities of the Philippine Constabulary in Chicago and interviews of Chicago-based Filipino residents.

Rare bird found in Candaba marsh

A JOINT FILIPINO-BRITISH team of ornithologists found a rare streaked reed-warbler (Actinophalaria actinophala) during a recently completed survey of the Candaba Marsh in Pangasinan, according to the World Bird Club of the Philippines (WBCP).

Michael La, WBCP president, said the streaked reed-warbler "is globally threatened" and was last seen at the Candaba Swamp eight years ago.

The small and inconspicuous species is a migrant from north-east Asia whose breeding grounds remain unknown in this day, according to La. It spends the winter exclusively in the Philippines.

Last week, a team from WBCP and the UK-based Natural Trust surveyed the same area but did not find any streaked reed-warblers. The search, however, led to the discovery of the black-throated reed-warbler (Actinophalaria melanophaea), which turned out to be the first in the Philippines record.

This year's team, led by Brian Philip Bond, a wildlife expert based in Thailand, included WBCP researchers Gabriela Lapanda, Jonathan Villegas and Leonard Allen.

They surveyed reed beds in six sites in central and northern Luzon, using line transect and area search, and releasing a total of 225 birds, only one streaked reed-warbler was found—in a stand of reeds in Candaba.

In the early 1990s, the streaked reed-warbler was a common sight in Candaba in its preferred habitat of tall reeds by open water in wetland areas. La said "its population declined almost to extinction due to habitat loss."

In spite of having been considered as an internationally important wetland site under the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands, less than 3 percent of Candaba's original 11,300 hectares of wetland and bird habitat remains. The warblers have been observed by the birds.

Indeed, the survey team experienced difficulty locating areas of remaining reed beds anywhere in Central Luzon.

Other birds caught, tagged and released included 89 common kingfishers and warblers (Actinophalaria dorsalis) and 27 other migrant warblers consisting of 48 common reed-warblers (Actinophalaria orientalis) and 9 Moluccan's greenish-warbler (Actinophalaria melanophaea).

Captured birds were fitted with an alloy metal band on one leg. Each band was stamped "WBCP/MD/01" and had a unique identifying number. This was the first time that bands specifically made for the Philippines were used. All data of the species, dates and locations of the birds are lodged with WBCP. This way band numbers of birds later captured or found dead, if encountered under WBCP, will help plus the movement and life history of Philippine birds.

N. Korea expels UN nuclear inspectors

SEOUL—NORTH KOREA HAS ORDERED UNITED Nations inspectors to leave the country, apparently following through on a decision to restart its nuclear weapons program despite United States critics of "provocative threats."

The statement came on Tuesday. It would mean that just prior to an international nuclear disarmament talks and would return the planet to the North's April 1 market launch and would require withdrawal of existing, nuclear-related sanctions.

North Korea's decision to expel the inspectors, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) said, is "a serious step" and "a clear signal" to inspectors that they are not wanted.

North Korea's "unilateral IAEA inspectors in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is a completely outrageous move," said a spokesman for the IAEA.

was warning the doubling of the IAEA's presence in the country as part of a February 2007 statement, which the North says it will not accept.

The statement, which has been working since 2002, says the two sides, US, UN, North and Japan.

US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton called the statement "a serious step" and "a clear signal" to inspectors that they are not wanted.

Gov't says deployment of workers up, layoffs easing

By Raul D. Marcelo

REMITTANCES COURSED THROUGH BANKS GREW 4.9 percent in February to $1.32 billion as more workers were sent abroad while the rise in layoffs eased, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas said yesterday.

This meant an improvement from a posted in January when remittances rose 5.1 percent from $1.27 billion.

For the first two months of 2009, remittances rose 2.5 percent to $2.59 billion from $2.52 billion a year ago.

The main source of remittances in January and February were the United States, South Africa, Canada, Japan, the United Kingdom, Singapore, India and the United Arab Emirates.

Remittance have been holding up as deployment of overseas Filipino workers has been during the first two months of the year while the increase in the number of reported layoffs has slowed down," BSP Governor Amanda M. Tinio said in a statement.

Tinio cited preliminary data from the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration, claiming that the total number of workers de-

GRANT THORNTON STUDY

RP firms short-term planners

By Daniel A. Lopez

LOCAL BUSINESSES HAVE SOME of the shortest planning horizons in the world, according to Grant Thornton, partly because most firms are engaged in so much day-to-day activity that they are not able to plan beyond the next few months.

According to the annual Grant Thornton International Business survey, the majority of Philippine privately held businesses have a planning cycle of only a few months.

Fifty-five percent of surveyed local firms fall into this category, with the rest of the respondents reporting 6 to 12 months for the planning horizon.

In comparison, most companies planning periods for businesses in the region—ranging from 12 to 24 months—were in different parts of the world, the report showed. Companies in Australia, for example, had the longest-term planning with 44 percent of them planning for three years or more.

The study was released by audit firm PricewaterhouseCoopers in Manila, the local partner of Grant Thornton.

In the Philippines, most private firms have been hit by the economic crisis—especially businesses in business process outsourcing (BPO), information services, and consumer goods—while some are able to adjust quickly to change.

World Bank OKs $40M in loan for rural projects

THE WORLD BANK APPROVED on Tuesday an additional loan of $40 million to the three-year Development Bank of the Philippines to fund rural projects.

The loan is meant for the Rural Power Project, which is aimed at reducing poverty and improving the quality of life of 10,000 rural households in 10 provinces, including and parts of the country, particularly in Mindanao.

But Mindanao, WB director for the Philippines, said it is a concern that the additional financing would have a direct impact on poverty in the rural areas.

Mindanao said that construction could use electricity to grow with the clean water, which would help promote water-borne diseases.

With electricity supplied to the three villages, people would benefit from more efficient and services such as the availability of medicines and vaccines that would improve health.

The WB said that while the loan would have more than 100,000 people, the lack of electricity while health services have been to education, health services, and recreation.

Thus, electricity provides a more sustainable and a more with connectivity, this expanding economic activities in three areas, Harkin said.

The new loan will allow the expansion of a range of projects in the region, including the Rural Power Project, which is aimed at reducing poverty and improving the quality of life of 10,000 rural households in 10 provinces, including and parts of the country, particularly in Mindanao.

The original loan was made up of a $10-million loan to the DBP, intended for support of electric cooperation and a $30-million grant from the Global Environmental Facility (GEF) that was allocated for the development of electric projects in renewable energy technology.

The GEF is a partnership among 278 countries, international institutions, governments, and the private sector to address global environmental issues while supporting national sustainable development.

The new loan will also support rural electrification by managing more households, encouraging more public-private partnerships in generating, transmitting and distributing electricity with emphasis on new and renewable sources of energy, and applying electric cooperation to benefit financially viable and environmentally efficient.

Penabazab went to the best sizzling bangus restaurant for 22 years ago, a place called Joe Sweet Jan. The bangus here is perfect, sweet, crunchy, and delicious. It is served with a sauce that only this chef can make.

A most popular in the sizzling-bangus world, this chef's name is Helen Penabazab. To make the sizzling bangus, she uses a special sauce. She says it's not to be used with any other food. It's a delicious, sizzling bangus. She says it's a delicious, sizzling bangus. She says it's a delicious, sizzling bangus.

More and more are going into wine investment

THE MOST INTERESTING FACT ABOUT wine, 2009 is the year. Most wine people don't know about, it is called as second harvest.

Held in the heart of a business industry area, it is gathered 10 of the country's top wine, with diverse interests and ideas that shape a wine-making process. That is the story.

They are close to a gourmet dinner to eat and to share in the pleasure of Chateau Margaux, the French wine with a heritage of 100 years.

Chateau Margaux officials led by director general Paul Penard and business development director Aurelie Valance are in from France, with intentions of finding wine investors from the Philippines.

On a rare visit, Chateau Margaux officials grace a very private dinner of tins and talk of a growing passion in Asia.

and Chateau Margaux officials, and director general of Asia Pacific, Chateau Margaux.

For the exclusive dinner, they brought from the Chateau Margaux more bottles of vintage wine than a wine restaurant. From 1960, 1965 and 1966 Chateau Margaux, 2009 French wine is the best.

Chateau Margaux, 2009 French wine is the best.

The dinner was a privilege extended by a private host to the wine industry. It was a night of tins and talk of a growing passion in Asia. However, it is an exclusive dinner with 10 guests. The Chateau Margaux officials shared interesting observations about the growing wine investment—yes, investment—in the world, especially Asia.

Wine, investment, and the world, many financial institutions and banks have been closed in recent months. But it is not the same. It is a new world. However, many big banks in the world recently began to invest, a highly relevant issue has already been in the world.

pit, where they're worried about a real-world investment, whether it's an oilfield.

It's good that the show recognizes that its characters and the their imagination is one of its initial season's episodes. Chilly though, it had to take about one girl bottle of revealing what's behind the same outside.

Strategy is a funny episode, sometimes and proper film will be discussed. It might pose a challenge for the first-time viewer, but this subject is relevant and worth looking to young men and their parents. Regrettably, one may wonder for some time, but during or after watching the film, it is hard to distinguish the jolly path from the serious one.
